Shopkeepers Put Lower

Prices On Fruit To Can

Not a single change in quotations was recorded in the vegetable markets during the week which would seem to indicate that the equinox has arrived. While an over supply or a scarcity may send retail prices up or down, the normal price for an average vegetable has not been reached. The valley growers may be counted on for staple green stuffs should the next week or so bring sufficient rains and this may result in a further lowering of prices on certain vegetables.

Following are the current quotations:
